

New Startups Business Ecourse Outlines Steps to Starting a Small Business Online

DM-Creative.com, one of the top sites for work at home business startups, has launched an exciting new startups business ecourse. The course enables users to easily discover how to start a small business on the Internet, allowing them to make money in the shortest amount of time.

Allen, Texas (PRWEB) December 21, 2008 - Today, Marketing Department located online at <http://www.dm-creative.com> launched a free 20-day email course for people who want to start a business on the Internet and work from home.

The 20 lessons form an easy-to-follow checklist for starting business on the Internet. An individual who knows little about the Internet can follow the directions and launch a business successfully.

This new email course explains the process of starting a small business, includes homework and a 90-day Internet marketing plan checklist. Startups complete the homework in an order that gains an advantage with search engines, such as finding a domain name that Google loves.

Marketing Coach Dan Marx says, "After researching the Internet for two years, this is the best course I've seen for people who are new to the Internet."

Ecourse enrollees receive one email lesson a day. By the final lesson, startups launch their site with visitors knocking at their door. Course participants with limited funds who want to work from home learn how to attract visitors with little to no out-of-pocket cost.

DM-Creative's Director of Client Services Alexandria Marx commented, "the free startups business course is the easiest way to get a small business online and make money in short order. It includes 18 worksheets to record key information throughout the 20-day course. With over ten years experience in copywriting, web design and Internet marketing, the lessons are a result of research, as well as our work with clients. We will continue to add to the course as new technologies and strategies become available."
